Fairview Learning Network - Bridge Lists and Adapted Dolch Words - Abbreviated Set

16121 1-12
Kit 1998 Fairview Learning Corp
The Bridge Lists are English phrases requiring American Sign Language (ASL) translation for understanding. For example, down the street requires multiple sign concepts, depending upon the context. "A ball hit down the street," is signed differently from, "A man walked down the street." If down the street is signed the same way in both sentences, meaning is lost. Bridging also allows the conceptual signing of phrases, rather than the word for word signing required by most sign codes. For example, if one signs, Put out the fire, word by word, one is literally signing, Pick up the fire and put it outside. Bridging provides the visual translation of the phrase's true meaning, Extinguish the fire. The Dolch Words are commonly used words found in the majority of basal readers. Deaf children and hearing children do not learn the Dolch words the same way. For example, made is a Dolch word which has multiple meanings – I made a present for you; I made my bed; I made money; My brother made me do that; The rain made the grass green. Most hearing children acquire the various meanings effortlessly through their sense of hearing. Deaf children, on the other hand, must see the different meanings in context in order to acquire them.
