Phonemes & Processes

18005 1-9

Kit 1990 Slosson

This is based on contemporary theories, research, and state-of-the-art knowledge from experts in phonology and articulation therapy. The P&P targets eight basic phonological processes: final consonant deletion, cluster reduction, stridency deletion, fronting, stopping, gliding, postvocalic devoicing, and prevocalic devoicing, and prevocalic voicing, as well as specific phonemes.

Phonological Awareness Training for Reading

25064 K-3

Kit 1994 Pro Ed

This program is designed to increase the level of phonological awareness in young children. It was developed because children who are sensitive to the phonological structure of words in oral language have a much easier time learning to read than children who are not. The program is divided into four sets of activities: warm-up, sound blending, sound segmenting, and reading and spelling. The warm-up phase includes rhyming activities to help children focus their attention on the sounds in words. Following the warm-up, children begin the formal training program with activities that teach them to blend individual sounds to make words. They then begin the more difficult segmenting activities. In the final phase of instruction, children are taught how to use their phonological awareness skills in reading and spelling.

Picture Pairs

21464 1-6

Game 1987 Communication Skillbuilder

Contains pictures of 50 minimal pairs, pairs of words that are alike in sound except for a single phonetic feature.

Practice Power for Phonology

24290 K-3

Book 1991 Lingui Systems

Overflowing with practice activities for phonology skills, this program will keep your students right on target. Engage parents as partners in the therapy process. Activities are easy to understand and provide a crucial link between home and school. Take-home games and activities are parent-friendly, providing many opportunities for togetherness learning and fun. The activities allow for listening and awareness of each target feature, as well as production and practice of these phonological processes: stopping, voicing, fronting, gliding /l/, gliding /r/, backing, initial consonant deletion, cluster reduction, syllable deletion, and final consonant deletion.

See Scape Visual Feedback of Nasal Emission

81498 1-12

Manipulative 1980 C.C. Publication

This device detects nasal emission of air during speech. With the nasal tip in one of the client's nares, any emission of air will cause the float to rise in the rigid plastic tube. Instant visual feedback eliminates the need for lengthy explanations of the problem to the client and gives an objective assessment of nasal emission. See-Scape gives an indication of air flow pressure rather than nasality but in so doing indicates a lack of velopharyngeal competence that is perceived as hypernasality.

SPARC for Phonological Awareness & Listening Comprehension

15216 K-3

Book 1997 Lingui Systems

Has stimulus pictures for assessment, remediation and carryover. You get over 1600 pictures for assessment, progress monitoring, instruction, and practice of important language skills. The first section targets phonological awareness skills. The second section builds on those skills with listening comprehension tasks and more complex language structures. Students will practice skills that help them: learn to read; understand school-related vocabulary; follow teacher directions; comprehend classroom content; and understand complex language.

Listening for Basic Concepts - All Year Round

17625 K-3
Book 1990 Lingui Systems
These listening and language lessons follow holiday and seasonal themes from September through May. Brennan Bear and his friends may be darling, but the concepts they teach in Listening for Basic Concepts All Year 'Round are dazzling! Brennan takes language concepts and teaches them throughout the year. Each month's theme and concepts are introduced in a story about Brennan's adventures and are followed by listening comprehension questions and listening sheets. At the end of each month, students take home letters and worksheets to show their families the spatial, quantity, and attribute concepts they've learned. Concepts include: next to, away from; through, around; most, fewest; widest, narrowest; row, first, next, last; several, some, nor, many; almost, empty, full; and beginning, middle, end.

Listening for Language All Year Round
